

HOME SCHOOL DAILY PLANNER

YEAR: _____

A PRIVILEGE TO PLAN

As I faced the formidable late-summer task of planning the new school year, I felt overwhelmed at the thought of dealing with all the books, goals, paperwork, and record keeping. I had so many good ideas to try to squeeze into my lesson plans and so little time to cover them all. Then, Jesus/Yahshua reminded me what a great privilege it is to be able to plan what would fill my children's minds during the school year.

As home schoolers, our educational choices are not at the mercy of a government school's agenda or of a school district's time or money constraints. We can select which materials to use and which to discard, as well as what to spend time on and what to skim through. We can tailor lessons to our children's individual needs, allow Scriptures to permeate each subject, and focus on building God's character. Above all, we find that Jesus often "fine-tunes" our plans by using life experiences to teach us Unexpected lessons.

Although the school year's tasks may seem overwhelming, and those waves of panic may come and go, let's remind ourselves of the great privilege it is to put together those lesson plans!

Commit your works to Yahweh (God), and your plans shall be established.
